Historical Note

The Massachusetts Conference, United Church of Christ, began as a series of independent regional ministers' associations. Originally these groups met to discuss matters of theology; as they formalized they took on the practice of ordaining clergy (in earlier Congregational polity the province of local churches). The earliest records of this collection date to 1722 from the Plymouth Association of Ministers. One important predecessor of the Massachusetts Conference was the Massachusetts Missionary Society, established in 1799 to send clergy to remote areas of Maine and New York and to establish new churches. The General Association of Massachusetts was established in 1808 to sanction the sending of the first missionaries of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. The General Association and Missionary Society merged in 1927.

In the twentieth century the Congregational churches, and the Massachusetts Conference, were shaped by denominational mergers, beginning with a union with the Christian Connection in 1931. The Congregational Christian churches spent several decades achieving a merger with the Evangelical and Reformed Church, which was completed in 1957. In the midst of these conversations, the Conservative Congregational Christian Conference (CCCC) separated in 1948; and those who did not wish to merge with the UCC established the National Association of Congregational Christian Churches (NACCC).

For further information about individual Association and Conference, look at collection level for historical notes.

Scope and Contents

This record group is comprised of collections that had been separately organized and described within the Congregational Library & Archives and now is an intentional collection that fall under the umbrella of the Massachusetts Conference. There will be state-conference level records, but the majority will be from intrastate regional minister associations, church conferences, or a combination of the two. There will also be some occasions where there will be further divisions within a conference or association: Hampden East and Hampden West, for example.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Arrangement

This collection is divided into collections, representing the different associations and/or conferences for a region. Within that there are series. Many merged together or were the merger of separate groups. To simplify the organization any shared town/county group: minister association, church conferences or combination of the two will be in the same series.

The first collection represents the over-arching state-level material of the Massachusetts Conference. The remaining collections are arranged in alphabetical order. For greater details, please review the description at the individual collection and series level.

Acquisition Information

These collections were originally arranged and described separately because they were donated by different groups and people over the course of the archive's history. In 2016, the Congregational Library & Archives decided to consolidate the separate collections into one intentional record group described here. By doing so, it would collate scattered components; update all description to current standards and practices; consolidate space; replace worn containers; and provide a centralized guide for researchers and staff. Researchers should review each individual collection for acquisition information, historical notes, scope, and arrangement.

Processing Information

Historical Note

The Missionary Society was organized on May 29, 1799 in Boston, Massachusetts, with thirty-eight charter members, most of them orthodox Calvinists opposed to Unitarianism. The Society was created to spread "knowledge of the glorious Gospel of Christ among the poor Heathen and in those remote parts of our country in which the inhabitants had not enjoyed the benefits of a Christian ministry and Christian ordinances"—primarily Maine and New York State. Nathaniel Emmons was the first President of the Society. In 1827 the Massachusetts Missionary Society and the Domestic Missionary Society of Massachusetts Proper (founded in 1818), were united under the name of the Massachusetts Missionary Society; consequently, their work was concentrated specifically in Massachusetts. The Massachusetts Missionary Society became the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society in 1844. The new title emphasized its primary mission of supporting Congregational churches within the United States, and Massachusetts in particular.

The General Association of Massachusetts Proper came into being in 1808 to support the work of the newly formed American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. This ultimately became the Massachusetts Congregational Conference in 1907. The Conference then merged with the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society in 1927, to become the Massachusetts Congregational Conference and Missionary Society. This merger was the result of twenty-seven years' of agitation by various members, and accelerated by a recommendation of the National Council of Congregational Conferences in 1907. The charter of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society was used as the basis for the union of the two organizations. In 1953 the name was changed to the Massachusetts Congregational Christian Conference, and in 1966 the name was changed again to the Massachusetts Conference of the United Church of Christ, as it remains to the present.

Biographical / Historical

The Andover Ministerial Association had no early written records, according to C.C. Carpenter's historical sketch written in 1913. The books referenced by Carpenter in the sketch are not part of this collection, so this cannot be verified. He noted, though, that the first meetings were hosted by Wilmington minister Isaac Morrill in 1763. Members came from Woburn, Middleton, North Reading, Billerica, Andover, Chelmsford, and Bedford. By 1797 the group had evolved enough to establish its name as Andover, the group's then-geographical center. The Andover Conference was founded in 1859 by the ministers of Lowell, Lawrence, and Andover. It was one of the last conferences established in Massachusetts. The Civil War monopolized the Conference's early work. Once the war was over, they took up new causes including temperance, Sunday observance, the labor movement and foreign missions.

Scope and Contents

The majority of the records are from the Andover Conference and came as a single donation, including the combined Association of Ministers and Churches era from 1915-1932. The single item relating to the Minister's Association is a list of members written by C. C. Carpenter. It covers the years 1763-1913. For the Association's anniversary year in 1914, Carpenter wrote a Historical Sketch, available in the library's non-circulating collection (9.3.2040). The Conference material is mostly record books of meeting minutes, membership, and a constitution. There are also two scrapbooks, one of news clippings, one of meeting programs, fliers, and occasional correspondence that had been pasted in.

Arrangement

The collection is arranged into three series, Church Conference, Minister's Association, Association/Conference. Within each series material is arranged in chronological order.

Collection ID Numbers associated with this collection are: RG0699 and RG5180.

Historical Note

The Barnstable Association, a group of ministers from Barnstable County, Massachusetts, first met in July 1792 for the purposes of "cultivating friendship and ministerial union," and "having better opportunity for consulting each other." The early meetings, held in individual minister's homes, consisted of lectures and discussions on a variety of topics. The organization has since evolved, as evidenced by the financial records in this collection. Once just for ministers, the Association currently helps facilitate the work of the churches, including credentialing and placement of clergy.

Historical Note

Essex South was established in 1827 and North Association was established in 1827 from a group of Salem Association ministers. Their objective was "promote the extension of the Redeemer's Kingdom, by more frequent intercourse of Christians interested in increasing benevolent influence of the gospel amongst its members." (v. 1, B 16) The two groups merged in 1983. In 2015, Essex and Andover Associations merged to form the Northeast Association. The Essex South Branch of the Woman's Board of Missions was established in 1878 after three years of debate as to whether there was warrant for such an organization. While several officers were named between 1875 and 1878, Its first president was Helen (Mrs. Walter E. C.) Wright of Danvers. Historical Information

The Marlborough Association of Congregational Ministers was formed and first met on June 5, 1725 in the house of Reverend Robert Breck, the second minister of the Marlborough First Parish Church. The formation of the association was the result of a vote of the Framingham Association the previous April. The Association dealt with "cases of conscience, questions of difficulty in church discipline, or matters of disagreement, between the parties in a church, or between pastor and people." The original members of the Marlborough Association were John Swift, Robert Breck, John Prentice, Israel Loring, Job Cushing, John Gardner, and Ebenezer Parkman. The association met four times annually, with Marlborough as the designated meeting place, though in practice meetings took place in the homes of many of the member ministers. Due to declining membership in the Association, the ministers decided to dissolve the Marlborough Association on October 18, 1814.

Historical Note

Worcester North was established in 1827. Worcester South was established in 1852. Worcester Central was established in 1852. In 1909 at the recommendation of the Massachusetts General Conference, the Worcester Central Conference adopted the name "Association." At the same time, control of ministerial standing, including ordination, was transferred from the local ministers' association to the larger Worcester Central Association. The minutes in this collection begin with these changes in 1909. In 1970, it merged with the Central Association, which joined Brookfield, Middlesex Mendon, Middlesex Union, and Worcester Associations, an active association/region within the Massachusetts Conference, UCC.
