BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Born in Scituate, Mass. Nov. 21, 1813; his parents, Charles Turner Torrey and Hannah Tolman Turner were first cousins and grandchildren of Rev. Charles Torrey; they died of tuberculosis in CTT’s infancy. CTT was raised in the home of his maternal grandfather, Charles Turner, Jr., a member of Congress. CTT attended Phillips Academy and graduated from Yale in 1833. He entered Andover Theological Seminary in 1834; at Andover Theological Seminary CTT became an abolitionist and organized a students’ antislavery society. Illness caused him to withdraw from ATS and he completed his theological training at West Medbury, Mass. under the instruction of Rev. Jacob Ide; CTT married JI’s daughter, Mary, on March 29, 1837.

The Mendon Association licensed CTT to preach in 1836; he was installed as pastor of Richmond Street Congregational Church (Providence, RI) and served at Harvard Street Congregational Church (Salem, Mass.), where he was pastor from 1838-1839. Anti-slavery politics overshadowed his pastoral duties and in 1838 CTT organized conservative abolitionists against William Lloyd Garrison and founded the Massachusetts Abolitionist, with CTT as editor. In 1838 conservative abolitionists founded the Massachusetts Abolition Society, with CTT as their agent. He resigned within a short period of time and in 1841 began to work in Washington, D.C. as a freelance correspondent.

While reporting the 1842 Convention of Slaveholders at Annapolis, Md. in 1842, CTT was arrested and the case received national recognition. Following the incident, CTT was appointed editor of the Toocin of Liberty, which later became the Albany Patriot; he left this position after several months and moved to Baltimore, Md. to become a businessman and assist slaves crossing the border from Virginia and Maryland. CTT was arrested and tried in 1844; he was convicted and sentenced to six years of hard labor at the Maryland State Penitentiary. CTT died of tuberculosis one year after his imprisonment (Dictionary of American Biography, p. 595-596) and was buried in Boston, Mass.
