Abstract:	The Congregational Church of South Hadley Falls began as the South Society in South Hadley when, in February of 1824, the population removed from the center of South Hadley felt they needed a more conveniently located church. Later that year, the Society united in a church organization called The South Church of Christ in South Hadley. The church did not become known as The Congregational Church of South Hadley Falls until 1918. The congregation voted to close in 2012 due to declining membership and pledges. Collection includes annual reports and records of church meetings, legal papers regarding the building and gifts made to the church, materials from women's and social groups, Sunday school records, membership records and cards, financial records, weekly church bulletins, photographs, correspondence, and several scrapbooks collected by church members and the church historian. Much of the collection has been used to create anniversary publications about the Church's History.

Historical Note

As early as 1733, a Church of Christ had been organized near the Center of the Town of South Hadley. Residents of the small village of South Hadley Falls, then known as the Canal Village, felt that they needed a more conveniently located church than this, so in February of 1824 they established the South Society in South Hadley. The Constitution of this Society was signed February 26th, 1824. The Society included people of different denominations, but united in August, 1824, with local ministers to establish themselves as The South Church of Christ in South Hadley.

The first officially listed minister is Rev. John Flavel Griswold, who served the South Church 1828-1831. While services were originally held in the upper part of a brick house, later known as the Brick Chapel, increasing membership required the building of a new church meeting house, which was completed in late 1834.

The church experienced a split in 1860 which lasted for 18 years. The primary cause of the rift was dissension over the choir and its rival leaders, but other matters of church policy became a part of the dispute, including that of women's voting during church meetings. In 1860, Rev. Richard Knight and the membership that supported him established a separate church, calling it The First Congregational Church in South Hadley Falls. This newly formed First Congregational Church received a new church building from Deacon Joseph Carew, which served as the main meeting house for services until the fire of 1947. The South Church of Christ continued to hold services at their original site until the two churches reunited.

Rev. Knight and Rev. Fisher (minister at the South Church of Christ) both resigned in 1878, which paved the way for a reunion of the two churches. New leadership chose representatives from both societies to serve as the church's trustees, and the South Church of Christ and First Congregational Church merged in October 1878 to become The Congregational Church and Society of South Hadley Falls. On December 11th, 1918, the church became unified as a corporate body under the name of The Congregational Church of South Hadley Falls. The church continued until 2012, when the congregation voted to close its doors due to declining membership and pledges.

The Women's auxiliary groups of the church have a lot of material representation in this collection, and because of this we are able to track the various mergers and interactions between them. The Young Ladies' Benevolent Society united with the Ladies' Society in the early years of the 20th century and became The Ladies' Benevolent Society. The Ladies' Benevolent Society later merged with the Women's Missionary Society to become the Women's Guild in the 1920s. The merger that has the most documentation in our collection is that of the Women's Guild and the Junior Guild, which took place in May 1951. The two combined to form the Women's Fellowship, which continued to exist until the church closed its doors in 2012.

Scope and Contents

The South Hadley, Mass. Congregational Church of South Hadley Falls records document the history and activities of the church and its members. Collection includes annual reports and records of church meetings, legal papers regarding the building and gifts made to the church, materials from women's and social groups, Sunday school records, membership records and cards, financial records, weekly church bulletins, photographs, correspondence, and several scrapbooks collected by church members and the church historian. Despite the church's complete destruction in 1947, there is reasonable representation from pre-1947 records, including original ledger books. However, researchers may find there are large gaps in the record due to this cataclysmic event.

Collection Inventory

Church and Society records, 1824-2012

Date [inclusive]: 1824-2012

Physical Description: 159 Files (1 microfilm reel, 1 object, 10 volumes, 147 folders)

Scope and Contents

This series contains materials relating to the social and professional history of the church, the church building, and the church services. The series is arranged into sub-series based on type, with items like Church Bulletins arranged separately from Annual Reports. Personal scrapbooks and documents collected by church members detailing individual church events have been given their own sub-series. Most of the materials date to the mid-20th century, but there is significant representation from the 19th century.

Church records and meeting minutes, 1824-1994

Date [inclusive]: 1824-1994

Physical Description: 16 Files (6 folders, 9 volumes)

Scope and Contents

This sub-series contains the original record books of the church, which span from 1824 through 1994. These books contain the meeting minutes from annual meetings, information regarding church membership, and records of the business offices of the church. Books 2 and 2A are indicative of the split that effected the church from 1860-1878. The original church charter (1824) and original specifications for the church building (1834) are contained in this sub-series. Early books in this collection are fragile and should be handled with care.

This sub-series contains materials that were created and collected by individual members of the Congregational Church of South Hadley Falls. Records from individual church events are found in this sub-series, including a small tea bell, which was part of the "Church Bell Project". Out of the collection of scrapbooks, the largest "Church History" scrapbook provides a detailed look into the history of the church. Other smaller, personal scrapbooks detail individual experiences at the church, including wedding information and newspaper clippings following local community activities. Additionally, this sub-series contains a collection of hand-written notes, copies of early meeting minutes, and drafts of multiple chapters discussing the history of the church, to be used as part of anniversary publications and celebrations.

This series also includes a few drawings and paintings of the church building.

Picture Scrapbook, undated

Date: undated

Physical Description: 11 Folders

Scope and Contents

This scrapbook was compiled by a member of the Congregational Church of South Hadley Falls. The photos represent the life of the church community through their ecclesiastical activities and community involvement. The titles of the individual folders were found written on paper used as separators between the topical collections, and the original order of the photos has been preserved.
